

Go Race Timing and Oz Endurance to become Timer Guys

Trevor Darmstetter of Go Race Timing and Patrick Todd of Oz Endurance are excited to announce that the two companies are merging into Timer Guys.

Go Race Timing is the current leader for road race timing in southcentral Kansas, and is looking to bring on the reach and connections of Oz Endurance to build a competitive force in event coordination to the entire Midwest region.

Go Race Timing brings a more than 35 year legacy of road race timing and directing in south-central Kansas. Go Race Timing owns the Wichita Turkey Trot, a road race held around Thanksgiving that had more than 2,800 entrants in 2015. In addition to the ownership of several large events, Go Race Timing has been the exclusive timing company for high profile events like the Wichita River Run.

Oz Endurance brings a reach to Timer Guys that spans across the midwest region. Expanding well outside of Kansas, Oz Endurance brought Timer Guys to the Houston Marathon, and has connections reaching across several states, as well as experience in the fields of timing triathlons and cycling.

Timer Guys will look to expand event management across Kansas, and the Midwest region in the worlds of road running, cycling, triathlons, ultra-marathons, and more.
